

George and Awn in Thailand

The New normal is a little over my head.

Don't you love my dinner photos?? The leaves too are edible and have the flavor of Anise. Really good.

Last night we ate dinner at Jek's house. He recently moved into a new place. This is not Jek to the left.

Anyone who visits us here in Chiang Mai has almost certainly met Jek. He is a great guy, sociable, gregarious and fun. He cannot speak English but that does not get in the way. Years ago a bunch of Japanese students visited and we went out with Jek and some others. Our Thai friends could not speak English or Japanese. The students could not speak Thai or English (very well). But it was for many the best night of the whole trip.

Jek is like that.

Well, he and his wife have been jobless since the start of Covid. They were experiencing increasing debt. Debt on their house, their vehicle and cost of living debt. They did not live beyond their means until there were no means.

They are in their early 50s and had to sell their home. They have an adult son and a highschooler. It has been very tough. Walking with them through these days has been very hard. Awn and I are not experienced in this type of ministry. But the Holy Spirit, who guides us, is.

Pease pray for this family as they settle into their rented house. And for us, that we might be an encouragement and counsel them well.

For our King,
George and Awn
